Food waste is a big problem

where a lot of food that's still good to eat gets thrown away. This happens for different reasons, like when we buy too much food and it goes bad, or when stores and restaurants have extra food they don't use. When this happens, it's not just the food that's wasted – it's also the water, energy, and land that were used to make that food. Plus, when food goes to the trash, it produces a gas that's bad for the environment.

The important of this cause or industry

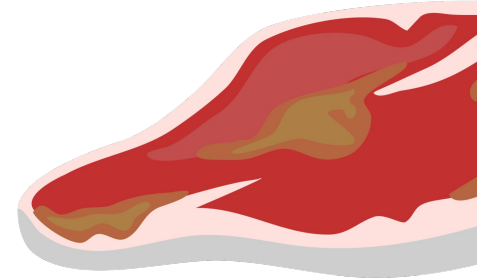

Addressing food waste is of utmost importance to our local community and the environment. By reducing food waste, we are taking a significant step to protect our surroundings and promote a healthier, more sustainable way of life. It's an action that not only benefits us today but also ensures a cleaner and greener world for future generations.
